Amendment	10/757,157

NOTES/COMMENTS:

Dear Examiner Bertheaud:

I am faxing you an Amendment (11 pages) in response to the office action of 10/04/2006, together with five replacement sheets of drawings.

We respectfully believe that the claims, as amended, overcome the objections/rejections set forth in the office action. We also believe that the replacement sheets of drawings overcome the objections set forth in the office action.

We look forward to receiving your response to this Amendment.

Sincerely,

M. Robert Kestenbaum

[0010] A construction, which is particularly easy to realize, can provide that the displacement piston element is displaceable between the first piston position and the second piston position. For this purpose, it is, for example, possible that the displacement piston element is displaceable in a piston housing with cylindrical aperture wherein the piston housing the region of the inlet chamber, into which the first piston region is inserted in the first piston position and the region of the outlet chamber into which a second piston region is inserted in the second piston region, are at least partially formed.

A complete listing of the claims as amended, with status identifiers, may be found on the following pages.
